

By the end of Year 6, children will not only leave the school being able to write for a variety of purposes, but able to write in a real life situation, essential for the next step in their education. There are 4 types of writing that will be covered in the English curriculum: narrative - writing to entertain; and non-fiction - writing to inform, writing to persuade and writing to discuss. Children will also cover a variety of poetry forms, building up a repertoire.

Purpose of writing to entertain (narrative): The purpose of narrative can be defined simply as to tell a story. However, that does not convey the many purposes of stories and the way that they work at different levels. The purpose of a narrator is to make the listener or reader respond in a particular way. Stories are written or told to entertain and enthral an audience. Stories can make us sad, horrify us, make us laugh, make us excited. They create imaginative worlds that can help us understand ourselves and the things around us and take us beyond our own experience. From the earliest times, stories have been a part of the way that people have explained their world, passed on their beliefs and memories and entertained one another. Narrative is central to learning, especially for young children who develop their understanding through making up stories about what has happened and what might happen. Children use narrative to organise their ideas, structure their thinking and, ultimately, their writing. Telling and writing stories is not simply a set of skills for children to learn, but an essential means for them to express themselves in creative and imaginative ways.

Common forms of narrative text	Talk for writing 'tales'
stories that use predictable and patterned language traditional / folk stories / fairy tales stories set in familiar settings modifying well-known stories (changing a character; amending the ending; changing the setting etc.) stories set in historical contexts myths and legends stories with flashbacks stories set in fantasy worlds / science fiction stories stories from different cultures adventure stories mystery stories scary stories narratives retold from another perspective (e.g. from the point of view of a different character) stories with morals or fables stories with dilemmas stories told as playscripts telling a story from a first-person narrative (e.g. diaries and letters)	wishing tale warning tale conquering the monster tale finding tale journey tale losing tale rags to riches tale tale of fear meeting tale character flaw

Purpose of reports: To provide detailed information about the way things are or were and to help readers/listeners understand what is being described by organising or categorising information.

Common forms of report texts:

- Describing aspects of daily life in history (e.g. fashion, transport, buildings)
- Describing the characteristics of anything (e.g. particular animals or plants; the planets in the solar system, different rocks and materials; mythological creatures)
- Comparing and describing localities or geographical features
- Describing the characteristics of religious groups and their lifestyles in re information leaflets
- tourist guidebooks
- encyclopaedia entries
- magazine articles
- biographies

General text structure: In the absence of a temporal (chronological) structure where events happen in a particular order, non-chronological reports usually have a logical structure. They tend to group information, often moving from general to more specific detail and examples or elaborations. A common structure includes:

- an opening statement, often a general classification (sparrows are birds)
- sometimes followed by a more detailed or technical classification (their Latin name is...)
- a description of whatever is the subject of the report organised in some way to help the reader make sense of the information. For example:
- its qualities (like most birds, sparrows have feathers.)
- its parts and their functions (the beak is small and strong so that it can ...)
- Its habits/behaviour/ uses (sparrows nest in...)

Purpose of instructions / procedural texts: To ensure something is done effectively and/or correctly with a successful outcome for the participant/s

Common forms of instructions / procedural texts:

How to design and make artefacts

Technical manuals: how to operate computers, phones, devices

How to carry out science experiments or to carry out a mathematical procedure

How to play a game

Writing rules for behaviour

How to cook and prepare food

timetables and route-finders

posters, notices and signs

instructions on packaging

Generic text structure: Begin by defining the goal or desired outcome e.g. How to make a board game

- an introductory sentence or paragraph
- list any material or equipment needed, in order
- provide simple, clear instructions. If a process is to be undertaken, keep to the order in which the steps need to be followed to achieve the stated goal
- diagrams or illustrations are often integral and may even take the place of some text (Diagram B shows you how to connect the wires.)
- a final evaluative statement can be used to wrap up the process. E.g. Now go and enjoy playing your new game. Your beautiful summer salad is now ready to eat.

Purpose of discussion texts: To present a reasoned and balanced overview of an issue or controversial topic. Usually aims to provide two or more different views on an issue, each with elaborations, evidence and/ or examples.

Common forms of discussions texts:

- Non-fiction book on an 'issues'
- Write-up a debate
- Leaflet or article giving balanced account of an issue
- Writing letters about pollution, factory farming or smoking
- Writing essays giving opinions about literature, music or works of art

General text structure: The most common structure includes:

- a statement of the issues involved and a preview of the main arguments
- arguments for, with supporting evidence/examples
- arguments against or alternative views, with supporting evidence/examples

Another common structure presents the arguments 'for' and 'against' alternatively. Discussion texts usually end with a summary and a statement of recommendation or conclusion. The summary may develop one particular viewpoint using reasoned judgements based on the evidence provided.
