4e. Identifies, selects and highlights key words in the question and the text to answer what, how and why questions

Commissioned by The PiXL Club Ltd. August 2023

Key words

Key words are the most important words in the question that help us identify what is being asked.

- When we read closely, we scan for specific information to answer questions.
- We might look for what a character is wearing or what colour hair they have.
- To help us do this, we can identify key words.
- We can then read the sentence around the key word to answer the question.

Identify key words

Let's look at the question to identify the key words.

What does Varjak's mother call him?

What does Varjak's mother call him?

what usually tells us that we are looking for a thing or an action, depending on the rest of the question

mother is the noun that we will scan for

Scan for key words

Scan the text for the noun mother.

When you have spotted the noun, place your hands on your head.

'Sweetheart,' said Mother, coming over and straightening his collar, 'the garden is a nasty, dirty place. You're a pedigree cat. A pure-bred Mesopotamian Blue. What do you want out there?'

Varjak looked around: at the stuffy furniture, the locked-up cupboards, the curtains he wasn't allowed to climb. He'd never been anywhere else, but this had to be the most boring place on earth.

'Hunting,' he said. 'Aren't we supposed to hunt? The tales talk about—'

'Tales!' snorted his big brother Julius, green eyes glinting. It was said that their ancestor Jalal had green eyes. Everyone in the family had them—everyone but Varjak Paw.

Q: How and why does some British Jews adapt their seder meal?

Izzy and Alex want to investigate how many Jews celebrate Pesach in Britain today. They think of some questions a social scientist might ask.

Do all Jews in Britain celebrate Pesach?

Alex

Would you still have a Seder if you don't believe in God?

Izzy

How could we find out the answers to these questions?

Q: How and why does some British Jews adapt their seder meal?

Izzy

What is data? How is it helpful?

Data is information we collect to help us learn about people, places, or things.

We can collect data through asking people questions using a survey. A question might be; 'What is your favourite animal? or 'How do you get to school?'.

Q: How and why does some British Jews adapt their seder meal?

Izzy

Is there a survey that asks Jews about Pesach?

Yes! A survey asked 5,000 Jews in 2024 about what they believed and what they do in their daily life.

It is really useful data to understand Jews in Britain today.

Q: How and why does some British Jews adapt their seder meal?

The survey asked the question:

'Do you attend a Seder meal at Pesach most or all years?'

Yes, I attend most or all years.	No, I do not attend most or all years.
71%	29%

What does the results mean?

How could we find out 'why' Jews eat the seder meal?

Q: How and why does some British Jews adapt their seder meal?

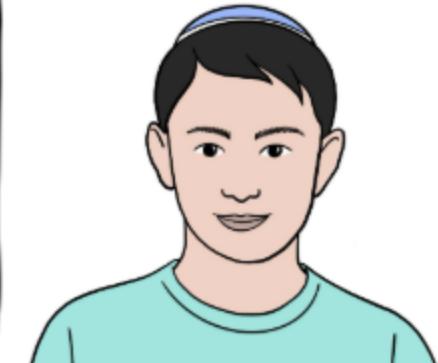

Izzy interviews Rafi. He is an Orthodox Jew.

Izzy

Hi, Rafi! What does the Seder meal mean to you?

Seder night is one of my favourite nights of the year. It symbolises the older generations passing down the traditions and knowledge of Judaism to the younger generation. We all celebrate together.

Q: How and why does some British Jews adapt their seder meal?

Hi, Sherri! What does the Seder meal mean to you?

Even though I am not religious, Seder night is important to me. It is a tradition my family observes every year. I feel part of a chain of ancestors going back 3000 years, to the first Pesach.

Wednesday 11th February

Q: How and why does some British Jews adapt their seder meal?

Some items on the Seder plate are different.

A beetroot replaces the shank bone.

An avocado seed replaces the egg.

Why do you think these items have been replaced?

Q: How and why does some British Jews adapt their seder meal?

Why does your Seder plate look different?

I am vegan, which means I don't eat meat or dairy.

So in my family we have adapted the Seder plate for a vegan diet.

Rebecca

The lamb shank symbolises the blood spread on the door frames by the Hebrews.

The juice of a beetroot keeps the symbolism the same, but is adapted for a vegan like me!

The egg symbolises new life.

We use a seed or a flower as new life grows from seeds! The symbolism is the same, but it is adapted for a vegan like me!

Q: How and why does some British Jews adapt their seder meal?

But over time, people wanted to remember more helpers in the Pesach story, especially women.

That's why some families now add Miriam's Cup, filled with water.

Miriam was Moses' sister. She was brave, caring, and helped lead the people to freedom.

TBAT: create objects using scissors.

Look at the key points from the image.

If you were to recreate it in your own style, what shapes would you need to cut using your scissors?

Wednesday 11th February

TBAT: create objects using scissors.

Watch the video on Matisse as he cut giant leaf shapes with shears again. Use your mixed paint and cut out the shapes directly from the painted papers with scissors (i.e. no marks to be made on the paper before you cut out the shapes). Try to use discarded shapes left behind from your cuttings.

COUNTRY AND WESTERN LINE DANCING

Lots of line dances are performed to country and western music which originated in America.

In a line dance, a group of people repeat a sequence of steps whilst arranged in rows.

Line dancing is very popular in Texas where it is also known as 'kicker dancing'.

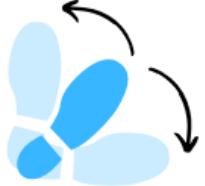

That's because lots of cowboys live in Texas and in our boots, it's easier to use flat-footed glides with heel and toe touches rather than a lot of 'toe type' dancing!
